

Here is what I have:

The LACCW has selected to focus on Education this year (2012-13). The commission unanimously agreed that Education is the key to solving many of the issues that women face in today's society. The LACCW understand that there are multiple aspects to education. One Webster definition includes "The development of one or all of a person's powers of body and mind." The LACCW sees its' roll as supporting women in the development of body and mind in order to be successful in any and all aspects of their lives.

This focus on Education for the year will include:

1. Continuing to provide young women with the scholarships to meet their education goals;
2. Continuing to provide programs and information on women's health issues to support a healthy community;
3. Continuing to support the efforts of partner organizations working the meet the needs of women;
4. Increasing outreach to, and connection with, Women's Studies departments at community colleges and universities in order to better serve women in Los Angeles County (e.g., co-sponsoring CSUN's GWS Department Phenomenal Women event, seeking research that will provide data to further the welfare of women studies and research in Los Angeles County);
5. Connecting LACCW events to websites of "partnering" organizations;
6. Monitoring our presence and visibility in order to better educate all constituents of the work being done by LACCW;
7. Celebrating women and their great work through the annual luncheon thus providing more visibility for Los Angeles County women and organizations that support them.

The LACCW is committed to serving the needs of women of all ages through all aspects of education.
